Province Launches New Policing Website

Website aims to share information on a provincial police service

The Government of Alberta has launched a website that provides information on a potential provincial police service. While the website provides information in a new format, it does not provide any additional details in response to the RMA's earlier concerns and questions as to how a potential transition from RCMP contract policing to a provincial police service would impact costs, levels of service, and local input into policing for municipalities.

Access to the government's new website has been added to the RMA's Resources for Provincial Police Transition, which includes resources for members developed by the RMA.
